

HISTORY, PH.D.

Learning Outcomes

1. Students will demonstrate competence in three fields of history.
2. Students will produce significant contributions to scholarship prior to completing the dissertation.
3. Students will produce doctoral dissertations that contribute to scholarship in their major field.
4. Students who serve as graduate teaching assistants will develop competence as teachers.
5. Students will become familiar with the employment options for which the Ph.D. in History is a valuable credential and will identify paths most likely to lead to fulfillment of their individual career goals.